local is our future steps to an economics of happ

In an increasingly interconnected world, the importance of local economies has gained significant recognition as a crucial pathway toward achieving sustainable happiness and well-being for communities. Emphasizing local production, consumption, and social cohesion can foster resilient economies that prioritize human happiness over mere financial gains. Transitioning to a more localized economic model not only reduces environmental impact but also strengthens community bonds, supports small businesses, and promotes a more equitable distribution of resources. This article explores the concept of "local is our future" as a foundational step towards an "economics of happ"—an economic paradigm centered on happiness, sustainability, and social well-being.

Understanding the Shift: From Globalization to Localization

The Limitations of Globalization

Globalization has historically driven economic growth by expanding markets, optimizing supply chains, and enabling the rapid exchange of goods and ideas. However, it has also led to significant drawbacks:

- Environmental degradation due to long-distance transportation
- Vulnerability of global supply chains to disruptions
- Economic inequalities between regions
- Loss of local cultures and traditions

The Rise of Localization

In response to these challenges, there is a growing movement toward localization—focusing on local economies that prioritize community well-being and environmental sustainability. Localization entails:

- Supporting local businesses and artisans
- Promoting local sourcing and production
- Encouraging community-based decision-making

- Reducing reliance on global supply chains

This shift aims to build resilient communities capable of withstanding economic shocks while fostering a sense of belonging and purpose.

Core Principles of an Economics of Happiness

Redefining Success Beyond GDP

Traditional economic metrics like Gross Domestic Product (GDP) focus solely on economic output, often neglecting quality of life and social well-being. An economics of happiness emphasizes:

- Well-being and life satisfaction

- Manage focus: Keep attention on desired outcomes rather than fears.
